This class is a workshop in how to use the Mines Project Delivery Process. This is the follow-on class to the Introduction to Project Management class and is the third in the series to help people increase their knowledge about project management at Mines.

The learning objectives of the course are:

- Understand the Project Delivery Process and how it works
- Be able to use key templates in the process

The class is held in two-half day sessions. It starts with definitions of additional terms relating to project management. It briefly reviews project delivery and then looks specifically at the Mines Project Delivery Process. This includes exercises of filling out selected templates from the process. Ample time is left for questions and discussion to ensure participants understanding of the topics.

Clayton Durkee, the Project Portfolio Manager, teaches the class. Clayton has a wealth of project management knowledge and experience from his many years of managing projects, programs and PMOs.

The prerequisite for this class is the Introduction class. It is for anyone who is or will be managing a project.
